

AUDEMARS
PIGUET (AP)

? Heritage and reputation: More than 140 years of history and recognized technical innovations. ? Constant innovation: Pioneers in complications, such as minute repeaters, ultra-thin tourbillon, direct impulse escapement, among others. ? Extreme luxury positioning: High prices guarantee substantial margins. ? Iconic design: The Royal Oak and its variations are global references in sports luxury. ? Iconic collections: the Royal Oak (1972): Revolutionized the industry by being the first sports watch aesthetics and watchmaking for the 21st century. With a complex case with multiple geometry, lacquered or enameled dials and new generation calibres, it aims to combine technical tradition with contemporary expression. ? Strong presence in pop culture: Partnerships with celebrities, athletes, musicians and films that increase brand recognition. ? Independent family business: Agile decision-making, long-term vision and preservation of the brand's DNA. ? Model exclusivity: Reduced catalog and limited production, reinforces the unique character of each piece. ? Strong secondary market: High demand and appreciation in the pre-owned market confirm the robustness of brand equity. ? Royal Oak Innovation: Launch of the first luxury sports watch in 1972, revolutionizing the watch industry. Weaknesses

? Limited production: Low volume of parts produced per year, restricting the revenue scale. ? Environmental image: ?Latecomers/Non-transparent? classification by WWF in 2018 affects ESG reputation. ? Dependence on a niche: Very restricted target audience; sensitive to economic crises in luxury consumption. ? Controlled distribution channel: Few own points of sale, limiting penetration into new markets. ? Succession risk: Dependence on family governance processes can generate uncertainty in generational transitions. ? Restricted scale: Annual production of around 40,000 units limits revenue growth potential. ? Reduction in the use of traditional watches: The popularization of ?smartphones? and ?smartwatches? reduces the demand for traditional luxury watches. Opportunities

? Expansion in emerging markets: China, Middle East and Latin America with strong growth in ultra-luxury. ? Sustainability and transparency: Invest in green practices, raw material certification (Fairmined, RJC) and ESG reports to improve the image. ? Customization and digital services: Offer online personalization, after-sales experiences and virtual interaction platforms. ? Collaborations and limited editions: Partnerships with artists, designers and celebrities expand appeal and reach. ? ?Certified Pre-Owned? Program: Create or collaborate with official certified ?pre-owned? platforms to capture additional revenue and retain new customers. ? ?Gold-backed appeal?: With the price of gold at ??95/g, the intrinsic value of gold watches reinforces their appeal as a safe haven asset in high inflation environments. ? Strategic management of raw materials: Long-term partnerships with suppliers and use of certified materials to ensure supply and reinforce ESG credibility. ? Hybrid innovations: Respond to the threat of ?smartwatches? with models that integrate technological features without losing the identity of a luxury watch. Threats

? Fierce competition: Patek Philippe, Vacheron Constantin, Richard Mille and independent brands reinforce the competition in the luxury market. ? Economic volatility: Recessions and exchange rate variations directly affect luxury sales. ? Global inflation: Increased costs of raw materials, energy and labor put pressure on margins and customer purchasing power.

? Volatile raw materials: Fluctuations in prices and risks of shortages of precious metals and minerals can impact production costs and deadlines. ? Counterfeiting and ?grey market?: Replicas and parallel resale can devalue the official market. ? Behavior change: Younger generations may prioritize experiences and services over the possession of material goods. ? Commercial tariffs and protectionist barriers: Imposition of import/export taxes that can increase costs, reduce margins and limit access to markets. ? Increased crime: Rising crime may discourage the use of luxury watches, for fear of theft, affecting demand and brand visibility. ? Popularity of ?smartwatches?: Increased demand for smart watches may reduce the preference for traditional mechanical watches, especially among younger generations. ? Perception of artificial scarcity: Criticism points out that the deliberate limitation of production creates an artificial scarcity that raises prices and raises distrust among consumers, which can erode the brand's reputation. SWOT ANALYSIS OF PATEK PHILIPPE Strengths

? Heritage and historical reputation: Founded in 1839, it is one of the oldest watchmaking houses with uninterrupted production and, since 1932, it has remained under the control of the Stern family, guaranteeing independence and long-term vision. ? Vertical production and patented innovation: Designs and manufactures all stages in-house, from design to finishing, holding more than 100 patents in complications such as perpetual calendar, ?flyback? chronograph and minute repeater. ? ?Ultra-premium? positioning: Limited annual production (around 70,000 pieces in 2023), high prices and robust margins reinforce the exclusivity status. ? Emblematic collections: the Calatrava (1932): Example of classic elegance. the Nautilus (1976): Sporty-luxury design designed by Gérald Genta. o Aquanaut (1997): Appealing to a younger audience, with a composite bracelet. ? Strong appreciation in the secondary market: Worldwide auctions present Patek Philippe at the top of the most expensive watches sold. ? Global recognition of prestige: Watches are a ?status? symbol among collectors and brand ambassadors around the world. ? Talent retention: Specialized craftsmen with decades of experience guarantee continuity of exclusive ?know-how?. ? Restoration and certification services: Accredited internal workshop for restoration and authentication, valuing the legacy and increasing customer confidence.

? Restricted production scale: Although it guarantees exclusivity, it limits the ability to increase revenue and reach emerging segments. ? High entry price: Makes it difficult to attract beginner collectors and young professionals. ? Dependence on central lines: Calatrava, Nautilus and Aquanaut account for a large part of sales, which increases the risk in the event of a change in trends. ? Family governance: Despite ensuring independence, future successions can generate uncertainty. ? Digital challenge: Less developed e-commerce and online communication strategies compared to some competitors. ? Exclusive supply of materials: Dependence on single certified suppliers can create vulnerability in stock delays. ? Gender balance: Low proportion of women in technical departments, which limits diverse perspectives. ? High training costs: Significant investment in the qualification of artisans, with long periods of apprenticeship before autonomy.

Opportunities

? Growth in emerging markets: Expansion in Asia, the Middle East and Latin America, where ultra-luxury is in strong demand. ? Official ?Certified Pre-Owned? program: ? Capitalize on the secondary market with guarantees and dedicated ?after-sales? services. ? New collections and limited editions: Launch of innovative lines to attract urban audiences and young collectors. ? Sustainability and transparency: Adoption of ?Fairmined? gold, RJC certification and ESG reports to improve the image among consumers concerned about the environment. ? Digital personalization: ?Virtual-to-store? platforms for customizing dials, bracelets and engravings. ? Hybrid ?Smartwatches? ? Development of mechanical models with complementary technological features. ? VIP loyalty programs ? Exclusive events and personalized experiences for high-value customers. ? Cultural partnerships ? Collaborations with museums and artistic institutions for commemorative editions and events.

Threats

? Global recessions, inflation or international conflicts can reduce demand for luxury goods.
 ? Unauthorized resale and the proliferation of replicas damage the brand image and challenge price controls. ? Generation Z and ?millennials? tend to value experiences over the possession of material goods, which may affect the demand for traditional mechanical watches. ? The appreciation or depreciation of major currencies (Swiss franc, euro, dollar) can affect price competitiveness and profit margins. ? New standards for the extraction and processing of precious metals may increase production costs and delay launches. ? Vulnerabilities in e-commerce and CRM systems can compromise sensitive customer and manufacturing data. ? Suspension of in-person events, fairs and closing of boutiques can reduce sales and brand visibility. ? Criticisms and campaigns suggest that the deliberate limitation of production creates an artificial scarcity, inflating prices and potentially generating distrust among consumers and damaging the brand's reputation. SWOT ANALYSIS OF VACHERON CONSTANTIN Forces

? Heritage and antiquity ? Founded in 1755, it is the oldest watchmaking house in continuous operation, with 270 years of history and tradition. ? Belongs to the Richemont Group ? Benefits from marketing, logistics and finance synergies, but preserves a high degree of creative independence. ? ?Haute horology? with manually applied finishes, ?anglage?, ?guilloché?, engraving and classic enamelling, guarantee prestige. ? Develops complications such as ?tourbillon?, minute repeater and perpetual calendar, signed by the ?Poinçon de Genève?. ? Iconic collections o Patrimony: sober lines of classical inspiration. o Overseas: sporty-elegant with interchangeable strap. o Historiques: reissues of emblematic models. ? Restoration Center in ?Plan-les-Ouates? that takes care of historical pieces, enhancing the brand?s legacy. ? Superior quality certification that reinforces trust and differentiation.

? Good appreciation at auctions for rare and vintage references, sustaining brand equity.

Weaknesses

? Produces only around 30,000 pieces/year, far from Patek and AP, which may restrict revenue growth. ? Less variety of complications and lines compared to the ?Holy Trinity? competition. ? Belonging to the ?Richemont Group?, although it offers advantages, can impose strategic alignments that do not coincide 100% with the brand identity. ? Minimum purchase value (>?15,000) limits access to new enthusiasts and younger generations. ? Online communication and ?e-commerce? less robust than some rivals and a more restrained presence on social networks. ? Compared to AP and Patek, it releases fewer rare ?vraiment? pieces, which reduces ?Buzz? among collectors. ? The strength of the Swiss franc could make prices less competitive internationally. ? Boutique network limited in number and geography, forcing customers to travel for assistance and purchases.

Opportunities

? Expand the number of boutiques and events in China, the Middle East, India and Latin America. ? Create an official platform for authenticated vintage watches to capture revenue and retain enthusiasts. ? Partnerships with artists, museums or art/car brands for numbered series with high appeal. ? Augmented reality tools to virtually ?try on? models and configure customizations. ? Certification of precious metals and stones, carbon footprint reports and environmental neutrality initiatives. ? VIP annual maintenance programs, complimentary parts loan and advance launch reservations. ? Discreetly integrate connectivity functions without losing the luxury mechanical character. ? Traveling exhibitions and publications that celebrate centuries-old milestones and pioneering watchmaking. Threats

? Direct pressure from Audemars Piguet and Patek Philippe by the same ?ultra-premium? collectors. ? Financial crises, inflation and political instability that slow down luxury consumption. ? Unauthorized resale and counterfeits can dilute ?perceived value? and trust in the brand.

? Generation Z and ?millennials? value digital experiences and technological products over mechanical ones. ? New laws on precious metal extraction and import/export barriers that increase costs. ? Closing points of sale and postponing large watch shows can reduce visibility and sales. ? Attacks on CRM systems, ?e-commerce? and customer databases put sensitive information at risk. ? Criticism about deliberate limitation of production to inflate prices can generate discredit among consumers

AUDEMARS PIGUET Product: Strongly committed to boldness and innovation. The Royal Oak line is its absolute icon, mixing industrial design with artisanal finishing. It launches limited pieces, uses materials such as ceramics, forged carbon, and focuses on its own movements. Likes to provoke with unexpected designs and cultural "collabs". Price: Positioned in the "ultra-luxury" segment, but with a more "culturally desired" aura than just traditional. Entry prices are around 20-25 thousand euros, but exclusive pieces can exceed 200 thousand. The perceived value is high, partly due to "hype" and scarcity. Place: Has invested in an almost exclusively direct distribution model, through its "AP Houses" in key cities. It left many multi-brand retailers to better control the experience and positioning. Some editions are only accessible by invitation or relationship with the brand. Promotion: Communicates in a modern way, with a strong digital presence. Collaborates with artists, musicians, athletes and participates in events such as "Art Basel". The brand focuses on impactful visual narratives, behind-the-scenes content, and videos that associate the watch with contemporary culture and performance.

PATEK PHILLIPE Product: It is the guardian of tradition. Its watches are classic, conservative in design and highly sophisticated in movements. He invests a lot in Grand Complications and in his own calibers. Each piece is made to last for generations, without giving in to fashions. The focus is on heritage and technical perfection. Price: Operates with an even higher pricing strategy, based on the idea of "legacy and investment". A Calatrava starts at 25 thousand euros, but complications and special editions easily go up to 500 thousand or more. It's a mark of heritage, not ostentation.

Place: Remains faithful to the traditional distribution model: highly selective authorized points of sale and few own boutiques. Purchasing is often shrouded in formality and restricted access, reinforcing the idea of ??prestige and scarcity. Promotion: Maintains a reserved and institutional tone. Its most famous campaign, ?You never actually own a Patek Philippe...?, focuses on generational value. The brand avoids celebrities, remains discreet on social media and favors word-of-mouth among collectors. VACHERON CONSTANTIN Product: Focuses on artistic ?savoir-faire?. The brand favors manual finishing, enamels, engravings and other traditional watchmaking arts. Pieces such as the ?Métiers d'Art? and ?Les Cabinotiers? reinforce the status of mechanical jewelry. It has a more poetic and artistic touch, without giving up technique. Price: Prices are in line with haute horlogerie, although slightly below PP at the ?entry-level?. A Patrimony can start at around 18 thousand euros. At the top, ?Les Cabinotiers? pieces easily exceed 300 thousand. The value is in art and tradition, more than in immediate social status. Place: Opts for a hybrid model: maintains presence in luxury retailers and own boutiques, with increasing investment in brand experience and digital. It also offers made-to-order sales and service by appointment for demanding customers. Promotion: Communicates through art and detail. ?Storytelling? is centered on Its advertising presence is strong with 50 campaign registrations and its number of boutiques is the highest with 63. Finally we find Patek Philippe, the hottest brand in the Holy Trinity. This brand has the smallest number of boutiques with just 3 and the smallest number of ADS also with 3, it gives the impression that PP intends to constantly control the narrative around the brand by controlling the channels of communication. And this makes its presence on social media even more curious, this brand that aims to show itself in a curated way and seeks to do so appropriately decided that despite its presence focused on Instagram and Youtube, with carousels of reels and images and long and short videos, it would leave its accounts active on Facebook, LinkedIn, X and TikTok without posting anything at all. In terms of optics, it seems to me to be a wrong decision considering the segment, it would be preferable to deactivate the accounts because here, it is better to have no presence than to have a careless presence. This creative decision shows that despite being the best sellers in this segment, they can make incorrect decisions that Audemars Piguet can take advantage of.

The Golden Circle exists as a framework used to define the way a brand communicates. It establishes that communication must be done from the inside out, starting by passing purposes and values before promoting products or services. This framework then allows for effectiveness in strengthening the emotional relationship between public and brand as it makes the brand communicate in a way that is "perceived" as more human and genuine. Since Audemars Piquet sells luxury watches that no one "needs" it is important to add the greatest possible value to the brand ("perceived" or not). AP's "Golden Circle" exists in the following form: WHY - (The Reason for Being) Create magnificent and complex pieces of time that they transcend functionality, where each is an artistic expression of mastery, heritage and innovation. This is the heart of the brand: passion, legacy and creative boldness. It's not just about watches, it's about a legacy that is worn on the wrist.

This creation method highlights rarity, exclusivity, authenticity and a human touch, exactly what the contemporary luxury consumer values most. WHAT ? (The Offer) Swiss watches of exceptional complexity that combine traditional watchmaking techniques with cutting-edge innovation, each piece is a limited edition work of art. From Royal Oak to Code 11.59, AP's offering is never just a product, it's a cultural statement.

1. LinkedIn ? Strengthen AP's leadership and reputation (ToFu/MoFu) Objective: In 3 months, increase the number of qualified followers on LinkedIn by 1,500, publishing content that demonstrates that Audemars Piguet is at the top not through luck, but through know-how and work in excellent watchmaking. 2. Instagram ? Increase engagement and visual brand recognition (MoFu) Objective: In 3 months, achieve a 25% growth in engagement (likes, comments and shares) on Instagram publications, through impactful visual content that conveys the exclusivity and innovation of Audemars Piguet, with an average frequency of 1 post per day. 3. YouTube ? Convert qualified leads through premium and exclusive content (MoFu) Objective: In 3 months, launch a premium series of 6 episodes with John Mayer and exclusive customer stories (3 brand ambassadors and 3 normal customers), aimed at converting watch lovers into high-value leads. The objective is to increase direct contacts and appointments for personalized consultations, visits to boutiques and private events by 20%, through content that reinforces exclusivity and allows the capture of leads via forms or CRM integration. 4. Facebook ? Strengthen the relationship and generate trust with more mature audiences (MoFu/BoFu) Objective: In 3 months, increase significant interactions (comments + private messages via Messenger) with users 35+ by 30%, through content that combines legacy, human stories and local activations (events in boutiques, watchmaking experiences, discreet launches).

LinkedIn ? Sophisticated and Craftsman Why: Channel to showcase complexity, mastery, tradition and innovation. The audience values ??the process, heritage and intelligence behind the brand. Tom: Intelligent, technical, human. Example: "From Le Brassus to the world: where haute horlogerie is a human story of patience, precision and purpose."

Instagram ? Timeless and Poetic Why: Visual platform where emotion and lifestyle merge with the image. Tone: Sensory, minimal in words, poetic. Example: "It's not just a watch. It's a whisper of time, engraved in gold."

YouTube ? Culturally Fluent and Contemporary Why: Channel for audiovisual ?storytelling?, exploring intersections with art, music, design and figures such as John Mayer. Tone: Modern, elegant, narrative. Example: "When rhythm meets precision, every second is a note."

Facebook ? Reliable, Relatable and Long-lasting Why: Facebook continues to be relevant for 35+ audiences, where many real buyers of haute horlogerie can be found. Tom: Serene, close, respectful and emotional. An invitation to trust and shared memory. Tone Example: Some movements count time. Others tell stories.

WhatsApp ? Exclusive, Discreet and Personal Why: Direct and private communication channel with high-value customers. Ideal for personalized sharing, scheduling experiences, after-sales assistance and exclusive previews. Tom: Elegant, direct, human and attentive, like a whisper between those who already know each other. Example: "Good afternoon, Mr. Victor. The Royal Oak model you requested arrived this morning. We reserved the first one for you."

? Values ??the heritage and story behind each watch ? Looks for exclusive and highly prestigious pieces ? Appreciates craftsmanship, precision and durability ? Prefers discreet channels, such as private Instagram and LinkedIn, to maintain exclusivity
 Digital behavior:

? Consumes premium and curated content ? Prefers long-term relationships with brands, valuing personalized service Challenges:

Lucas ? The Aspirational Young Man

Age: 28 years old Occupation: Technological or creative entrepreneur, young professional on the rise Marital status: Single Income: Medium-high, with tendency to grow quickly Estimated Net Worth: ?500K ? ?5M Values and motivations: Fascination with innovative design and contemporary culture Looks for brands that convey aspirational ?status? and are aligned with modern ?lifestyle? Likes to experiment and share trends on social networks (Instagram, TikTok, Twitter) Values experiences, technology and authentic ?storytelling? Digital behavior: Very active on social platforms, seeks inspiration and social validation Follows influencers, cultural events and technological news Challenges: Access to premium products without compromising personal identity Finding brands that offer meaning and exclusivity without seeming elitist

? Difficulty finding truly unique pieces in a market where luxury is increasingly accessible and mass market. Little Personalized Customer Service:

? Frustration with brands that treat high-value customers as just another number, without exclusive service to match. Loss of historical value in new collections:

? Skepticism towards modern models that ignore the brand's historical DNA, appearing more commercial than authentic. Lack of discretion in luxury marketing:

Here we chose the 4 (actually 5, but let's get to it) social networks that best suit our target audience and therefore our personas. The initial choice fell on LinkedIn and the remaining platforms were chosen taking into account which ones have the greatest synergy with it. As AP's target audience is affluent and with "means", it was important to check which social network these individuals can be found on. According to studies focused on "UHNW", this group tends to be found in a higher percentage on LinkedIn, when compared to other groups, as it is a professional social network, data also indicates that the use of LinkedIn tends to increase depending on the average income, which means that an individual with a higher income is more likely to be found on LinkedIn than someone with a minimum income (It is possible to observe an overrepresentation of individuals with an income greater than "150,000 per year). Statistics from the "Datareportal" portal indicate that there is a very high correlation between the use of LinkedIn as the main network and the use of Instagram (85.4%), Facebook (85.3%) and Youtube (78.5%), which fits perfectly with the brand's objectives in terms of the message it wants to convey and the type of content it wants to present. I also decided to add WhatsApp (84%) to this group of networks. This would be the social network in which the brand could interact with customers directly, whether to schedule visits to the boutique (after it opens in this hypothetical scenario), request bracelet adjustments, stay up to date with new arrivals, find out about private events, or even reserve/buy a piece.

According to studies carried out with a special focus on this type of consumer, it is possible to see that there is a growing tendency to use WhatsApp as a shopping 'hub'. The 'post-Covid' period saw brands make a 'pivot' in order to meet the needs of these consumers, who were looking for a direct and private line of access to brands 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. A particularly illustrative case is that of Mercedes-Benz Turkey: by integrating WhatsApp directly into its ads, it replaced traditional forms with a click that immediately started a conversation with the brand. The result? 93% increase in conversions, almost three times more qualified leads and even sales made directly in the conversation. More than convenience, it was about designing a discreet, functional channel with a human touch, exactly what modern luxury demands. Another example of luxury that knew how to take advantage of this channel was Dolce & Gabbana Alta Moda. During the pandemic, the brand transformed WhatsApp into a true intimate point of contact with its 'UHNW' customers. Exclusive fittings began to be accompanied by video calls and personalized chats, where choices of pieces costing tens of thousands of euros were made without leaving the sofa, whether on a yacht or in a country house. WhatsApp is no longer just a tool and has become the invisible 'hub' of luxury, where personalized and discreet service reinforces the exclusivity and proximity that haute couture clients demand.

1. INSTAGRAM ? AESTHETICS, EXCLUSIVITY AND VISUAL NARRATIVE Why: Lucas lives immersed in visual culture and trends. Instagram is where you get inspired and connect with brands that reflect design, innovation and status. Victor, although more selective, discreetly follows brands to observe exclusive collections and events. Create desire and aspirational presence with Lucas. Reinforce Victor's prestige image. Content Type:

? Highlights from limited collections ? Behind-the-scenes artisanal production ? Editorial aesthetics ? Collaborations with designers or musicians (e.g. 'reels' with John Mayer)

? Behind-the-scenes stories, sponsorships, cultural initiatives ? Interviews with master watchmakers or executives ? Content on legacy, innovation and sustainability ? ?Posts? with calls to visit the boutique or make appointments 3. YOUTUBE ? DEPTH, EXPERIENCE AND QUALIFIED CONVERSION Why: Victor looks for depth, long videos on the history of the brand, personalization processes, testimonials from collectors. Lucas is attracted to inspiring and creative content, series with cultural figures, behind-the-scenes lifestyle and engaging storytelling. Inform and delight, to motivate concrete actions such as scheduling visits or customization requests. Content Type:

? Premium series hosted by John Mayer with celebrity clients and ?regular? clients ? Artisan processes, customization, interviews ? Collector testimonials ? CTAs like ?Book your private viewing? or ?Visit the boutique?

? Publications of collections with emotional and mature ?copy? ?
Behind-the-scenes photo album or launches ? ?Reposts? on YouTube and LinkedIn with narrative adaptation ? Publicity of private events with local segmentation ? Invitations to book appointments ? ?Lives? and ?stories? at events or production moments ? Segmented ads with a button for Messenger or WhatsApp

March 14-29 (https://www.notion.so/Calend-rio-de-Conte-dos-21abf944dc0b80dca4a4c9e13a76f5db?source=copy_link) The weeks chosen for this calendar depended on the brand's co-founder's birthday. The paid campaign that would be launched by Audemars Piguet would aim to capture leads by promoting the inauguration of "AP House Lisbon", which would be the first time since its inception that the brand would be present (the first time directly, as at the moment the brand is present in our country, but only through the use of "Boutique dos Relógios Plus" as "authorized seller") physically in Portugal. The opening of this space would satisfy a need that lovers of watchmaking face in Portugal, at their disposal the Portuguese customer has Patek and Vacheron boutiques but not AP, which, taking into account our target audience, is an omission that is harmful to our image in Portugal, especially in the eyes of those "High Net Worth Individuals" who are looking for an exclusive experience and direct access to the brand without having the need to "talk" to it through a third party. A quick search on the "Chrono24" platform (which is the largest watch buying and selling platform in the world) allows us to see that there are as many items for sale from the Patek Philippe brand in Portugal, as Audemars Piguet and Vacheron Constantin combined. This reinforces the idea that the "Portuguese" values "this old school approach and if AP wanted to capture their attention it should invest in the local boutique and its "promotion". This campaign aims to capture Leads, the "conversion" would take place on Instagram (through a direct message asking for data and then forwarding it to Whatsapp) and would last for one week (the week that ran from 20/21 to 28 March, which would be the week between the private opening of the boutique until the opening to the public) (The date of the "screenshots" refers to 2026 only because it is not possible to define a date that has already passed. The Budget it would be "50,000" for this week of the campaign, without having any idea of the values practiced I decided to opt for the value of a popular watch from the brand, which means that a sale achieved through this capture of leads would be enough to recoup the investment. Our audience would be personalized/segmented by age (25+), location (Outskirts of Algarve, Funchal, Cascais, Oeiras, Lisbon, Porto and Almada), interests (Patek Philippe, Vacheron Constantin, Rolex, Ferrari, Lamborghini, Investing, Luxury Goods, etc....) and behaviors (Frequent Travelers and Frequent International Travelers). Our audience would be defined in terms of age and location, and the "AI" would optimize the "delivery" taking into account interests and behaviors without ever exceeding the total budget of "50,000. with the exception of "Facebook Notifications" because in this type of segment I believe it is not ideal to opt for this relatively invasive type of Positioning.

This work, like the one carried out in groups, was a complex task, partly due to the number of possibilities and partly due to the scarcity of data. Some of the concepts at a certain point start to mix with something similar (or perhaps the same) given by another teacher in another subject, even so I believe I managed to understand most of these ideas and, with luck, have applied them to this project. At the same time, I tried to distill this work a little more in comparison to the group project, with the aim of maintaining a 'leaner' work in which any error would be more easily identified, both by the teacher and by me, thus making this work a more accurate demonstration of my knowledge. Regarding the project itself, Audemars Piguet has proven itself to be a very competent brand when it comes to its social media marketing. The only flaws I can point out are the 'less than ideal' choice for brand ambassadors which bring a lot of negative feedback to the comments sections, the fact that they recently started posting 'reels' on Instagram which are very similar to advertisements and which, like the issue of ambassadors, brings the same type of feedback. Finally, and what seems to me to be the most glaring omission, we have the lack of 'storytelling' and appeal to nostalgia and community. It seems to me that the brand focuses too much on the watches it currently has in its portfolio and ignores those that have already left its ranks, the history (both of the brand and the watches it sold and their owners) is as important to sell as the watches, especially in a market as aspirational as this one. Overall, it was a job that I was able to enjoy and at the same time I believe that I managed to fulfill what was asked by the teacher.
